Many communities in the region have sustainability plans with the intent to reduce the environmental footprint of the community. One way for communities have chosen to reduce their environmental footprint is through sustainable procurement. However, sustainability and sustainable procurement are ambiguous terms. This presentation hopes to expose the MAPP members to the following concepts:

- Understanding of sustainable procurement
- How to determine if a good or service is truly sustainable and how to standardize this process
- How to develop/operationalize a sustainable procurement policy
- Dealing with challenges of sustainable procurement in the public sector
- Best practices in tracking and reporting sustainable procurement
